

Expanding New England Quakers' Capacity for Noticing Patterns Of Oppression and Faithfulness

A two-part interactive workshop on zoom

February 13th and 20th
10am-noon -- On Zoom

The Noticing Patterns of Oppression and Faithfulness Working Group (NPWG) invites all to a workshop to expand New England Quakers' capacity in recognizing and interrupting patterns of oppression and cultivating patterns of faithfulness, a process we committed to beginning at Yearly Meeting Sessions 2018.

February 13: Session One will focus on:

- Growing in community
- Identifying and understanding patterns of oppression
- Dismantling those patterns through faithful action

February 20: Session Two will deepen the first sessions learning through practice with:

- Interrupting patterns
- Developing stamina for receiving and giving feedback
- Engaging with examples and experiences that have happened in Quaker settings

All are welcome whether you are new to social justice work or have been doing it for a long time. We prefer that people attend both sessions. Review is always useful. If you have already attended a NPWG workshop, then signing up for Session 2 only is an option. Also, please consider inviting others from your meeting to attend.
