First Day School Art Show
Living Things....or...Anything You Want

Children were invited to select 1 to 3 pieces of artwork that they would be excited to share with the Friends Meeting at Cambridge community. The artwork reflects a broad range of subject matter, media, and approaches to artistic expression -- from paintings and drawings to custom cards, collages, and dioramas.

Additional artwork was created collaboratively at a Sunday evening family night in August -- including a large mural banner with an imaginary and spectacular landscape, as well as canvases that combine to create a quilt-like painting at the exhibition's entry.

Frames were generously donated by many Friends, allowing for a beautiful showcase for each piece. The arrangement of pieces was curated by and beautifully hung by the Exhibition Committee, who also organized the Opening Reception.

The Opening Reception on Sunday, September 21 was a well attended and celebratory opportunity for the community to admire the artwork, and learn more from the artists. Many children and families spoke about their work and their art making process.

The Forum associated with the show will be held on Sunday, October 13, titled "First Day School Art Show | Young Artists Share the Inspiration, Meaning, and Process Behind their Art". This will be an additional opportunity for in-person and virtual Friends to hear from the artists about the inspiration and process behind these artworks. What inspires them to make art? How do they make their art? And how does it feel to make art?

Thank you to all the artists and their families!
